DUELING IN BAD REPUTE

Reform Against the Practice Starts In Europe.

NOW BEING DISAPPROVED

Man-Maiming is Frowned Down by In telligent Germans, Frenchmen and Men of Other Nationalities.

There are few customs with regard to which theory and practice are more at variance than that of dueling in continental countries. The average intelligent German, Frenchman, Austrian or Italian strongly disaproves of the duel and regards it as an antiquated and undesirable institution, and yet this same man would, if challenged, undoubtedly fight, and in certain circumstances would himself challenge a person who had insuited him. It is not fair to accuse him of and in certain circumstances would himself challenge a person who had insulted him. It is not fair to accuse him of moral cowardice or even of inconsistency. Public opinion on this subject in continental countries is such that a man who refuses a challenge or fails to challenge when the code of honor would render such a course necessary will be socially estracized and in many cases will have to give up any government position which he may hald. The state of affairs is not so had to-day as it was fifty or even twenty-five years ago, but a number of duels are fought every year all over the continent, sometimes with fatal results. It is a curlous fact that a practice which is so closely bound up with feudal traditions and mediaeval supersitions should have survived at all in democratic and largely free-thinking States like France or Italy. On the contrary, the institutiona created by modern democracy—the parliamentary system and the press—actually fostered the growth of dueling by adding to the causes for which duels are fought, and, by breaking down social distinctions, enabled a larger number of people to indulge in them than under the old regime.

Four persons were injured, but none seriously.

The special train which left here this aftrnoon as soon as the wreck was reported got off in such haste that only three physicians boarded it—Drs. Edward M. Magruder, W. Douglas Macon and Don Preston Peters.

By the time the wounded reached the city, however, every doctor in the city and university had been summoned, and there was no lack of attention.

One of the most distressing scenes of the day occurred as soon as the train bearing the wounded pulled into Union Station. There the wife and five children, of Engineer McCormick had gathered to meet the husband and father, whom, they had been told, was uninjured. The first man that leaped from the car told of McCormick's death, and the anguish of the little woman and her children was so saddening that hardly a dry eye could be seen in the crowd of several hundred.

One of the passengers claims the train was running seventy miles an hour.

Operatives Return to Work on Old Basis After Five Weeks' Strike.

Weeks' Strike.

(By Associated Press.)

PHILADELPHIA, PA., July 7.—Of the 1,550 hands employed in the John Dobson Cloth and Blanket Mills, Falls Schuyi-kill, 1,409 returned to work to-day, terminating a strike of five weeks' duration. The operatives went back at the old basis of sixty hours a week. Most of the employes were unorganized, and especially the day workers. The cloth mill, however employs 300 union weavers, and 25 of these were among the strikers who reported for work to-day.

Another break in the textile strike for the fifty-five hour work week occurred to-night, when the Brussels carpet weavers' union voted to accept the proposition of the five manufacturers of Brussels carpets in this city. Four of these concerns offered to take back the weavers on the basis of fifty-eight, and three-quarters burs per week, while the Dobsons' proposition was to resume on the old basis of sixty hours per week, with an increase of five per cent, on the wage scale in the other mills, which has always been higher than at the Dobson mills. The union, by a vote of 133 to 61, decided to accept both propositions.

SPLENDID WEEK FOR GROWTH OF CROPS

Good Showing According to the Weekly Crop Bulletin.

The weekly crop bulletin for the week ending July 6 is as follows: Reports from correspondents in all sec-tions of the State indicate that the past ending July 6 's as follows:

Reports from correspondents in all sections of the State indicate that the past week was an exceptionally favorable one for crop growth and for field work. The days and nights were, for the most part, warm, and as the soil had been pientifully stored with mostatire by the rates of the preceding week a condition conductive of rapid growth, collained backward crops advanced at a remarkable rate. Absence of rain in the week offered excellent opportunity with prosecution of the opportunity. Pastures are holding out very well, though the warm weather was rather injurious to them. Haying was also prosecuted and would have been completed in many localities had not greater need existed for work in other directions.

Winter wheat harvest is finished in all portions of the State except some few localities in the Valley division, where securing of the crop is under way and well advanced. Where the crop has been cut threshing has begun. As a rule the yleid is a poor one and the quality is not as good as anticipated, but in the Valley division a more lavorable prospect exists than elsewhere that the yleid is a poor one and the gradity is not as good as anticipated. Stacking, hauling to barns and threshing has been the work of the week with respect to this crop.

Winter oats harvest is completed and the crop is threshing out poorly in all sections.

Spring oats, where not too far advanced toward maturity, received some benefit from the favorable weather of the week. In the northern portions of the State, where the crop is ripening, an improvement in condition has certified and in gardens it is orn, under the influence of favorable weather, has made a rapid advance. In some early fields and in gardens it is injury has been done to the crop by bud and Joint worms.

Tobacco made excellent progress during the week. The stands secured while a good deal of the crop is small, it is, as a rule, well worked and with

Potatoes (Irish).—The digging of this crop is about finished, and the yield of tubers has been very good both as to quantity and quality. Sweet potatoes are coming on nicely.

Fruit.—The prospective yield of apples is very good. Though the fruit on the trees was considerably thinned out by the June drop, there remains an average crop in sight except in a few localities where the drop was excessive. The outlook for an abundant crop of grapes is good.

Power of Charm in Women.

Power of Charm in Women.

Experience teaches that charm in a woman is of even greater worth than beauty. The world's history furnishes innumerable instances of this, and in the lurid light of the ghasily Servian tragedy Queen Draga stands forth as the latest example of the wondrous power of fascination. Like the poet, unhappily, she must be born, not made, who possesses this dangerous and subtle quality. But to a certain extent it can be cultivated, and Queen Draga made a cult of charm and its twin sigter, tact, from the cradle to the grave. She was not strictly beautiful, she had no ancestry, she was very much the senior of the young king who risked his throne and finally gave his life for her; but she possessed to a marvelous degree the power to sway to fascinate and to hold those with whom she came in contact. And furthermore she understood the art of dressing almost better than any other woman ir. Europe. She died in a peignoir, but its beauty seems to have impressed even her assains; and in life she is said to have never missed an effect or made an error in the details of her dress. In a greater county than that in which she rose to the highest position Queen Draga would have been a European power with whom to reckon. for no woman can dress to absolute perfect one Happily the ability to o bot and sway men and women all ke by der indefable charm without becoming a dagler only to the very few, but every woman may well be counseled to make this her ambition.—London World.

There is a kind of fascination for the untrained mind in restoring a historic figure, that has long stood in a niche of dishonor, to a place of admiration. Hence the efforts of Horaco Walpole to resild the hunchback image of Richard III.: of Froude to sanctify the wayward and bloody caprices of Henry VIII., and of a few sentimentalists to find virtues in the medicy of vices and graces that made up the Stuart family. By a like impulse several American writers have undertaken at different periods to set up the dishonored figure of Aaron Burr, whom the New England federalists would gladly have made President, in something the same light as that in which Puritante Connecticut and commercial Massachusetts tried to look at him when their hatred of Jefferson impelled them to vote for him in 1801. It is a vain labor: the character of Burr is too well understood, and the personal glamour that he exerted with men and women is too completely dispelled to allow anything but discredit to rest upon his name. In overt acts he was not so traitorous as Benedict Arnold; but in essential treason he was more infamous, and his victims were more numereus and important. Arnold had the traits of the bold mercenary; Burr of the insidious seducer.—Springfield Republican.
